October 14th, 2012

1.) Attendance Recorded.

2.) Treasury Report- The treasurer will make a current status of SAAC's account, so that proper allocation of funds can be made.

3.) SAAC Skyward- The content for November's edition of Skyward is being prepared. In addition to the regular announcements, safety topics and Internship spotlights, there would be instructions available to apply for SAAC. Students are highly recommended to apply, the organization acts as a line of communication between the student body and the administration of the JDOSAS. Furthermore, SAAC informs students on current issues at the aerospace college and welcomes student ideas and other inputs that would assist in the development and safety of the college.

4.) Peer Support Program- The informational meeting on the peer support was be held on Wednesday, October 10th at the Atmospherium. Despite the small turn out, the students who were present displayed interest and motivation in the program and are ready to get it started. There were also other students who were not at the meeting but are also interested in being peer mentors.

5.) Website- Two weeks have passed since SAAC has launched its new website and it has been significantly progressing. Available are the officers biographies, SAAC's involvement, FAQs, the constitution, meeting minutes, link to the FAA’s 1500, calendar of events and much more. The website is updated weekly, so stay tuned for more upcoming events.
6. SAAC Recruitment - SAAC welcomes anyone in the aerospace college to attend its weekly meetings. Membership is not required to attend. This semester SAAC has been successful in that regard; every meeting there are at least two non-officers present, occasionally sharing their opinions and ideas on the topics being discussed. The issues that are brought up during these meetings affect students in many ways, so it is crucial that they attend so that their voices can be heard. SAAC has also been visiting different classes, informing students of its current projects and encouraging them to attend the meetings and potentially be part of the group if they so choose to apply.
